ANTI-ASIATIC RIOT HARD FOR BRITAIN

Attack on Japanese at Vancouver is Embarrassing in View of Alliance With Oriental Power

VIOLENT OUTBREAK SHOWN BY REPORTS

London, Sept. 9.—The news of the attacks on Japanese and Chinese at Vancouver, B. C., did not surprise the colonial and foreign office officials here, who had long feared an outbreak against the Asiatics in western Canada.

But they have the greatest confidence in the ability of Canadians to suppress any disturbances and protect aliens. At the same time the officials realize that a most serious problem has arisen, particularly as the feeling appears to be strongest against the subjects of Great Britain's eastern ally and that it will require most careful handling, for whatever action is taken is likely to be resented either by the colony or by Japan.

The question has been the subject of consideration for some time by the imperial authorities, who have used their good offices on numerous occasions to prevent the enactment of anti-Japanese legislation by British Columbia.

It is understood that the matter was discussed at length during the recent visit of the colonial premiers to London, Australia being as much opposed to admission of Asiatics as are the Canadians. No steps were taken at the time, however, and the subject was allowed to lapse until the agitations were revived.

All the cabinet ministers are out of town at present, but the colonial and foreign office officials are seeking to obtain all the information possible on the subject of the Vancouver outbreak with the view of taking some action, the nature of which is difficult to surmise.

SOME DETAILS OF THE RIOT.

Montreal, Sept. 9.—A special from Vancouver says:

Saturday night the Asiatic exclusion league held a parade and later a meeting at which Lieut. Governor Dunsmuir, who vetoed the bill introduced by the present attorney general, to enforce the natal act in British Columbia, was burned in effigy and a resolution was passed to ask the Dominion government to allow this bill to become law. It was after that that the mob stormed Chinatown, deliberately smashing the windows in all stores.

Street orators gathered crowds who even sarmed up the telegraph poles and a strong cordon of police across the street had all they could do to keep the mob from again entering the Chinese quarter.

As there had been threats of burning, the fire brigade was ready with hose to use this method if necessary to keep the white men back.

While the speaking was going on the sound of breaking glass was acclaimed with joyful yells by the hoodlums. Then the mob broke loose on Howell street, a few blocks away in another direction where the Japanese reside.

Japanese Resisted.

Here windows were broken also but the Japanese resisted and with bottles and boards attacked their assailants. Several people were injured in the counter attacks. From the Canadian Pacific railway wharves a dozen Japanese were thrown into the water but were rescued.

Three white men were stabbed by Japanese and two others out with broken bottles. A newspaper man going home was held up by a Japanese and when the latter was taken to the police station a search revealed a murderous looking knife. All night the bands of armed Japanese walked the streets, keyed to high pitch by the excitement and bent on revenge. They were restrained however.

It was a coincidence that Mr. Ishii, the special envoy of the Japanese government sent to investigate the whole question of immigration, arrived last night on his mission.

JAPANESE VERSIONS OF RIOT.

Montreal, Que., Sept. 9.—The following telegram has been received by Consul General Nosse, at Ottawa from Mr. Ishii, director of commerce and trade, department of foreign affairs of Japan, who is at present in British Columbia studying the anti-Japanese movement in that province:

LEGIONS OF GRAND ARMY MEN STORM SARATOGA

Thousands Gathering for the Encampment of the Organization.

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 9.—The arrival of hundreds of civil war veterans today for the first annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic ever held here points to the greatest crowd ever assembled in Saratoga. By night 50,000 strangers will be here, of whom 15,000 will be veterans.

Commander-in-Chief Brown made his official appearance this afternoon at a dinner tendered the newspaper men by the village of Saratoga. The indications point to the presence of over ten thousand veterans in the parade on Wednesday afternoon.

BOY IS BADLY BITTEN ABOUT FACE BY A BULLDOG

Victim is Tommy French, Aged 11, of Brackenridge Street.

Tommy French, aged 11, was severely bitten about the face by a bulldog in the store of the Wayne Grocery company at 1420 Calhoun street this morning, the animal's teeth lacerating the lad's face in a painful manner. The victim is a son of Mrs. Ida M. French, a clerk at the Frank Dry Goods store, and resides at 125 Brackenridge street.

At th grocery store it was stated that the dog is a mere pup that is kept behind the office railing, but that children visiting the store have been in the habit of teasing the animal. When young French entered the store today and leaned over the counter to look at the dog the animal jumped at him and sunk his teeth in the lad's face. He was quickly beaten off and a physician summoned.

Dr. S. D. Sledd, who responded, found a circular cut two inches in length upon the right side of the boy's face, the left side of the lower lip had been partially torn away and there was a deep cut on the right side of the face where one of the animal's teeth had barely missed the right eye. A total of nine stitches were taken to close the wounds, and Dr. Sledd does not apprehend serious consequences, though he said it is impossible to foretell accurately the outcome. The dog is owned by Daniel Current, proprietor of the grocery store.

MET HIS DEATH BY ASPHYXIATION AT GAS WORKS

Gottlieb Unger Was Lifeless When Found Saturday Evening.

Gottlieb Unger, 61 years of age, for many years a foreman for the Fort Wayne Gas company, met death by asphyxiation in the gas works on East Superior street Saturday evening. His lifeless body was found at 5:25 o'clock by Lothar Hofmann, assistant superintendent of the works, and for more than an hour efforts to resuscitate the man were without avail. He resided at 635 Archer avenue.

GOTTLIEB UNGER.

Gas Works Foreman Who Met Death by Asphyxiation.

Unger was alone in the works when the mishap occurred, but investigation disclosed the fact that the "water seal," a restraining device used to control the gas, had blown out. It is a small quantity of water in a pot, sufficient to resist the pressure of gas. Beside the body of the man, which lay face downward upon the floor, was a can with which it is believed Unger was attempting to replenish the water in the pot and restore the seal. As he did so, it is probable that he received a choking charge of gas directly in his face and pitched forward to his death.

Officials of the gas company are unable to say how the seal came to be disturbed, but it is claimed that it would have been impossible except from some act of Unger himself. It is supposed that he unthoughtedly threw open the valve before the machinery was ready for it and the water was thus blown out, and in attempting to restore the seal Unger got in the way of a blast of gas and was suffocated. Had anyone else been present, the unfortunate man could have been dragged away to the open air and safety. He was due to leave the works for his home at 5 o'clock, nearly half an hour before the body was found.

VAST CROWD TO SEE BIG FIGHT IN FRISCO

Britt Thinks He Will Win and Gans Says He is Sure of it.

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 9.—The pugilistic contest between Joe Gans and Jimmy Britt for the lightweight championship of the world will begin at 2 o'clock this afternoon in an open-air arena constructed for the occasion at the Recreation grounds and promises to attract a larger crowd than ever witnessed a similar event.

Seats are provided for many thousands, but standing room will be at a premium. Although the betting odds are about 6⅔ to 10 in favor of the colored fighter the sporting public has liberally backed the California boy and much confidence is felt in his ability to win the coveted honor.

Britt Thinks He Will Win.

In a statement issued this morning Britt says:

"I realize that I am to face the hardest proposition of my career in the contest today, but I don't believe that Joe Gans can show me anything new in the fighting game. My fight with Nelson showed that I am better able to punch and I feel that I can be just as effective in the fight with Gans. I am making no predictions as when the fight will terminate, because I will be in the ring to win at the first opportunity and to go the limit if necessary."

Gans Out to Win.

When he was asked what he proposed to do Joe Gans expressed himself as follows:

"The public will get a run for its money. I am out to win and have told my friends to bet on me. I am forced to win this fight to prove the statements I made following the other fight with Britt. I would rather beat Britt than any other man in the world—bar one—and I think I can do it. It's a hard matter to pick rounds, but I can say this much, it will be as short a fight as I can make it."

"Battling Nelson," than whom no man is better qualified to judge, says that in his opinion Gans will win. He thinks that the colored champion is a better boxer than Britt besides being a harder hitter.

Although the weather this morning is cloudy the afternoon promises to be clear and fair.

STEAMER GOES ASHORE.

San Gabriel Going to Pieces Off Point Reyes—Crew Safe.

San Francisco, Sept. 9.—The steamer San Gabriel, which sailed from San Pedro day before yesterday for Umpqua in ballast, ran ashore one mile north of Point Reyes today during a heavy fog. It is believed that the vessel will be a total loss. The San Gabriel carries a crew of fifteen men.

The San Gabriel is in command of Captain Green, who preceded Captain Doras, of the ill-fated Columbia.

Word has been received at the weather bureau stating that a schooner is standing by the stranded vessel. A tug has left here for the scene of the wreck.

The Point Reyes life-saving crew has reached the San Gabriel and it is stated there is no danger of loss of life.

MAKING PLANS FOR SPREADING OF STRIKE

Telegraphers May Call on All Leased Wire Men to Quit Work.

Chicago, Sept. 9.—A meeting will be held tonight by the members of the Commercial Telegraphers' union to consider the calling out of the operators now employed in the broker and newspaper offices of this city and the men working on leased wires.

Yesterday a petition was in circulation among the members of the organization demanding that the officers call out these men regardless of the existence of contracts or agreements signed since the commencement of the strike.

The petition says in effect that the signers deem it necessary "that every member of the union be called upon to cease work immediately," notwithstanding any contract that has been signed, believing that any contract made that compels one "brother to work to the disadvantage of another is better broken than kept."

Prompt action is demanded of the union officials in calling out the men. The program to be followed will be settled at the meeting tonight.

Omaha, Neb., Sept. 9.—The telegraphers' strike in Omaha received a blow today when three of the very best class of striking operators returned to their old positions in the Western Union. A fourth striker, who applied for work, was not reinstated, the company claiming to have enough men to handle the business promptly.

STATE FAIR OPENS; GREAT CROWDS EXPECTED

New Live Stock Building Formally Dedicated by Governor Hanly.

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 9.—The Indiana state fair opened this morning, the chief event being the dedication of the new live stock pavilion, built with an appropriation of $10?,000 by the last legislature. The first day of the exposition gave indications of fine weather for the week and on this sign the fair management based the prediction that 600,000 people would pass through the gates before Friday evening.

Today was one of final preparation in all departments. For two days the fair grounds has been topsy turvy with exhibits. But by 10 o'clock this morning the entanglements began to assume form. The machinery wheels began to turn, the booths in the fine arts hall were finished, the trotters and pacers were taking their morning exercise as if they had been living at the grounds for years.

But in the horse and cattle divisions the superintendents were having their troubles. A train load of live stock from the Minnesota state fair had arrived to find that the barn room was all gone. Blooded horses and cattle were tied to trees and tent stakes, while department superintendents scurried for shelter for the stock. All the farm barns of the neighborhood and some shelters down in the city have been engaged for the animals. This was children's day at the fair, the youngsters having free entree to go where they pleased.

At 11 o'clock the ceremonies began at the live stock pavilion, with Gov. Hanly as the chief speaker. He was introduced by Sid Conger, president of the state board of agriculture, the governor discussing the growth and purpose of the fair.

KILLS DIPHTHERIA GERMS IN THREE MINUTES

New Anti-Toxin Discovered at the Ohio State University.

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 9.—Announcement of the discovery of an antitoxin that will kill diphtheria germs in the living human organism within the short space of three minutes, has been made at the Ohio State university by Professor Blylie, pysiological chemist, as the result of an exhaustive technical and intricate series of tests.

The discovery is accredited to Theodore Wolfram, a German chemist, now living in this city. The antitoxin was given tests in hospitals and private practice before announcements of its discovery was made. It is applied by infusion and can be applied in any quantity to the youngest patient.

BISHOP ISSUES LETTER ON FORTHCOMING JUBILEE

Speakers for Celebration of Fiftieth Anniversary of Diocese.

Rt. Rev. H. J. Alerding, bishop of Fort Wayne, has just issued to the clergy of the Catholic church in this diocese an official letter calling attention to the fact that on Sept. 22 the diocese of Fort Wayne will be fifty years old, and expressing the "earnest wish that some kind of celebration take place in your parish, and in all parishes and institutions of the diocese." It is left to each pastor to determine the precise day and manner in which the golden jubilee of the diocese will be celebrated.

Fort Wayne to Observe It.

In Fort Wayne, the episcopal city, Bishop Alerding announces that the day will be commemorated with solemn pontifical mass in the Cathedral, at which Very Rev. Andrew Morrissey, C. S. C., D. D., has consented to deliver the sermon.

In the evening of the same day appropriate exercises will be held at Library hall, the program including several grand chorises in which about one hundred singers will participate, and five addresses, as follows:

"The Day We Celebrate," by the chairman.

"The Pioneer Days," by Dr. H. O. Bruggeman.

"The Golden Years," by Hon. W. P. Breen, LL. D.

"Charity," Hon. Henry C. Berghoff, ex-mayor of Fort Wayne.

"Education," by Hon. Timothy E. Howard, of South Bend.

Bishop Alerding calls the attention of his clergy to the fact that this occasion "will be a splendid opportunity to acquaint the people with the grand record of the diocese; to inspire all, young and old, with greater love for religious work, and to awaken effective resolutions to follow closely in the foot-prints of those who have gone before us."

LEAGUE MEMBERS ABOUT COLLECTING MATTER FOR JURY

Saloons Were Open Under Belief That Fight Had Stopped.

Little knowledge of the dark and devious ways of the city was necessary to get a drink in Fort Wayne Sunday. A total stranger could have kept his eyes open and grown wise in a short time to the fact that the saloon men got a little more open in their plan of doing business under the belief that the members of the Good Citizenship league had relaxed their vigilance and stopped the fight against law violation.

This was not the case, however, and a lot of evidence was collected that will be submitted next week to the grand jury when it is convened and all of the cases against the saloon men will be taken into the circuit court for trial.

Two or three men in the vicinity of the transfer corner are particularly bitter in their fight to keep open on Sunday and against these an effort will be made to get three convictions and take away their licenses. Each Sunday is a separate violation and there is evidence enough in the hands of the league to convict certain saloon men four or five times. The plan of battle will be changed and the forces directed towards putting the persistent law violators out of business.

Cincinnati, Sept. 9.—During the night Dan O'Leary, the old time champion pedestrian, continued his endurance test of walking 1,000 miles in 1,000 consecutive hours at Norwood, a Cincinnati suburb. Notwithstanding his 63 years, O'Leary says he will surely complete the unique walk and he showed no sign of weariness at the end of his first eighteen hourly miles.

IMPROVED ORDER OF REDMEN MEET IN NORFOLK

Admission of Saloonists and Bartenders Among Big Questions.

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 9.—The great council of the United States Improved Order of Redmen convened today in sixtieth annual session with upwards of 350 delegates and several thousand visitors.

The council will be in session five days. It has some important work before it, including the question of the establishment of permanent headquarters for the great council, temporary headquarters having up to this time been maintained in Chicago. Louisville, Ky., is making a great fight for the permanent home. The home will be an office building to cost between $500,000 and $750,000. Amendments prohibiting the admission of saloonkeepers and bar tenders for membership in the order in the future will be among the important matters to be considered.

COUNCIL ADDS $200 TO FEES FOR DUNN'S LAWYERS

Appropriation Is Raised To $600—The News of the Courts.

The county council at a special session today allowed $200 more to be used for the prosecution and defense of Charles Dunn, making the total to be divided among the lawyers $600. They declined to act in the trial of his next case for $400 already appropriated.

When the matter was presented to the council the attorneys explained that it would take at least six weeks for a trial and they asked $800 and this was cut half in two when it was finally acted upon.

Before adjournment Saturday afternoon the council fixed the tax levy for next year 44.65 on the $100 of valuation, reducing the amount for county purposes from 28.65, as fixed last year, to 27.65, and increasing the bridge levy from 5 to 10 cents, allowing the bond interest fund to stand at 7 cents. This is an increase of 4 cents over last year.

The question of allowing $296 for extra clerk hire in the Wayne township assessor's office necessitated by the fact that the assessor was incapacitated for work for several months last spring was submitted to the county attorney for an opinion. An appropriation was made from the present general fund of $1,800 to purchase and set a new boiler for the heating system at the county infirmary and for insurance on buildings. There is only one there now and in case of a break down the buildings could not be heated until repairs could be made. This will require about $1,200 and $600 is to pay for new policies on the improvements.

Old Case on Trial.

The suit of Leland M. Potts, by his next friend, Albert Potts, against Joseph L. Pevert was placed on trial in the circuit court today. The charge is made that Potts was struck by Pevert and injured and the action was filed nearly four years ago.

SHED WAS ABLAZE.

Sparks set fire to a shed on the premises of Thomas Shovlin, 706 Locust street, shortly after 1 o'clock this afternoon, but the firemen kept the damage down to $5.

METHODISTS END SESSIONS.

Northwest Indiana Conference Is Closed at Greencastle.

Greencastle, Ind., Sept. 9.—The Northwest Indiana conference of the M. E. church closed its sessions here today; all interest centers in the appointments which were read by Bishop McDowell, shortly before noon. The greatest interest naturally centered in the name of the successor of Rev. E. A. Schell as presiding elder of the Crawfordsville district whose term of six years, as limited by the Methodist church law, has expired. The Rev. W. E. McKenzie, for several years pastor of St. Paul's church, Lafayette, was chosen by Bishop McDowell to succeed the Rev. Mr. Schell, and the appointment met with much favor.

The Rev. Mr. Schell will go to Laporte to become the pastor of the church there.

ANTI-ASIATIC RIOT HARD FOR BRITAIN.

Sept. 7 I found that during the early part of the evening there was held a demonstration of the anti-Japanese and Korean league and about 9 p. m. a number of rowdies, about 50 or 60, marched into the section of the city where the stores are kept by the Japanese and Chinese and threw stones, breaking considerable glass.

Following this attack there came another one, this time the number being increased to about 500, and the fronts of several of the stores were broken. So far as I can ascertain, only one Japanese was wounded. The police force did its best, but there is hardly any hope of relief in that direction. Consul Morikawa is staying at the seat of the disturbance trying to impress upon the city police to extend their protection over the Japanese residents, and at the same time to suppress the utmost excitement of the Japanese.

Advices From Japanese Consul.

Later last night the following telegram was received from Consul Morikawa at Vancouver:

Vancouver, Sept. 8.—In continuance of the message sent by Mr. Ishii, I have to report that a fourth attack was made by the rowdies about midnight on the Japanese quarters. On account of the vigilance of the Japanese and the city police, and the late hour their number gradually decreased. All the windows and door glass was smashed in fifty Japanese stores. Two Japanese were wounded.

All the facts will be laid before Sir Wilfred Laurier, the premier of Canada.

MET HIS DEATH BY ASPHYXIATION AT GAS WORKS.

Unger had been employed at the gas works for forty years, and was highly regarded by his employers. He was the oldest employe of the company and had been but recently given an increase in salary in recognition of his long and faithful service. Mr. Unger was widely known and was prominent in German circles. He was twice married, and is survived by the wife and four children—Clement, Frank and Miss Lina Unger and Mrs. George Gutermuth; a brother, Fred Unger, and three sisters—Mrs. Pauline Gross, Mrs. Leonard Fuchshuber and Mrs. Fredericka Strechnitz.

Funeral services Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence under the auspices of Concordia lodge, I. O. O. F., and Concordia Singing society, in which he held membership.

New High Altar at St. Mary's Church to Be Consecrated.

The new high altar recently purchased by the congregation of St. Mary's Catholic church is now en route from New York to this city, and it is expected that the altar will be formally consecrated early in October.

Redecoration of St. Mary's church, which has been in progress for many weeks, is now completed and all the scaffolding has been removed. The frescoing is extraordinarily pretty and the interior of the church is now most beautiful. It was the work of O. J. Kover & Son, of this city.

GOVERNMENT COTTON REPORT.

Washington, Sept. 9.—The census bureau today issued its first bulletin on the cotton report for the season, as shown by the returns from the ginners, showing a total of 191,416 bales up to Sept. 1, as compared with 407,551 bales up to the same period last year. In this statement round bales are counted as half bales. The great falling off is attributed to the lateness of the crop.

PHYSICIANS NEEDED ON SCHOOL STAFFS IS CLAIM

Examination in New York Shows Vast Number of Physical Defectives.

New York, Sept. 9.—That an enormous proportion of the school children of New York suffer from malnutrition, enlarged glands and defective breathing is demonstrated by the report of the committee on physical welfare, under whose direction doctors examined 1,400 boys and girls attending the public schools.

While the report indicates that the conditions found are neither new nor alarming, it points out the urgent necessity for corrective measures.

The results of the committee's investigations in New York are applicable to all large cities, especially Chicago, which ranks next to New York in school attendance.

The 1,400 children examined here were those reported by board of health doctors as suffering from physical defects. A feature of the examination was that a large percentage of the defective children were of the well to do class, whose parents might easily have afforded preventive medical treatment. The chief troubles found by the examining physicians were malnutrition, enlarged glands and defective breathing. It is reported that if the percentages hold good for all the school children in New York 48,000 suffer from malnutrition, 187,000 from enlarged glands and 230,800 from defective breathing, a total of 465,800.

12,000,000 Defective Children.

These figures apply to the children throughout the United States, on the ground that all defects found here can be found elsewhere, and it thus is estimated that there are 12,000,000 school children in the country who have physical ailment. New York's ratio worked out gives 1,440,000 suffering from malnutrition, 5,615,000 from enlarged glands and 5,925,000 from defective breathing.

A special point made in the report is that many of these defects exist in children without knowledge of parents, who fail to take precautions solely through ignorance of their children's condition. The report says "the large percentage of the defects indicated are easily remedied and many could be prevented by proper care, though, except in the cases of defective vision, the causes are not always easily determined."

It is not with any purpose of creating an alarm over the physical condition of school children that the report is made. The object is to pave the way for the presentation of a plan that the committee has in mind to improve conditions in a rational way.

Plan Urged to Solve Problem.

The ideas are embodied in the report in the following language:

First—A thorough physical examination of all children of all schools.

Second—Notification to all parents, followed when necessary by a second notice and visits to inform and persuade parents to take proper action.

Third—The enforcement of the existing laws and securing proper authority, where this is now lacking, to compel parents who refuse to take necessary steps.

Fourth—Periodic re-examination of school children during school life.

Fifth—Physical examination of children when applying for work certificates.

Sixth—Enforcement of health, tenement house and child labor laws.

Seventh—The establishment, in connection with boards of education, of departments of school hygiene, whose duties shall be to see that school buildings are so constructed and so conducted that they cannot of themselves produce or aggravate physical defects, and that the school curriculum should be so devised and executed so as neither to produce nor aggravate them.

Value of Medical Supervision.

It is hard to say just which of these divisions is considered the more important, because the proposers would be unwilling to sacrifice any one of them unless under the greatest stress. But it may be said that the examination of students in the schools and the periodic re-examination is considered as about the biggest thing that can be accomplished at this time.

The idea is that a doctor shall be assigned to each school, who shall have in charge the physical examination of all the students who enter and who are in the school at the time the system is put in operation. He will make careful note of all points of the condition of children, so that if there are things which deserve attention they may be called at once to the notice of the parents. The present examination by doctors of the board of health is for the determination of the presence or absence of contagious diseases only.

The periodical re-examinations will help to determine whether the children are making any physical advances. In line with this part of the plan it may be said that there is a suggestion that the card system used in telling of the progress in studies of each child should be paralleled or supplemented by another card system telling of the physical standing of the students.

Hope to Put Plan Into Effect.

The matter of the physical examination of the students will interweave, of course, with the seventh provision of the committee. After the physical examination it will be in order to suggest the plans of hygienic reform and further those of physical education. The present physical education in the schools, while it goes far to achieve the results looked forward to by the committee, also has to do in great measure with athletic training, which is not strictly the thing aimed at.

Under the provision for the hygienic reforms the children would learn better to apply the results of their physical education work.

It may be seen that the plan of the committee involves a rather close personal attention to the pupils and their ailments. The committee recognizes that this is the case and realizes also that so personal a treatment will require time and labor as well as the expenditure of a considerable sum of money by the board of education. It believes, however, that the obvious merits of the plan are such that there will be no difficulty in putting it through.

BUSINESS MEN RESPOND AND PROMISE HALF HOLIDAY

Fair Association Meets Encouragement—Horses are Coming to Park.

The efforts of President J. C. Peters and Dr. W. F. Myers, secretary of the Great Fort Wayne Fair, who are laboring hard to bring about a general closing of stores and manufacturing establishments on Friday, Sept 20, in order to celebrate Merchants' and Manufacturers' day, are bearing fruit and this morning several responses were received to the letters sent out last week.

S. Bash & Co. will give their employes a day to enjoy themselves and express a willingness to suspend business for the occasion and extend their best wishes for a successful fair in the following letter:

"We shall be pleased to close our manufacturing establishment on Friday afternoon of fair week to give all the boys a chance to attend the fair. We sincerely hope the coming meeting will be the most successful we have ever had and will do everything we can to that end. This is in answer to your letter of the seventh.

"Yours truly,
"S. Bash & Co."

August Bruder also wants to give his clerks an opportunity to see the big fair and he writes:

"Your favor of September 7 at hand. We are willing to close our establishment on Friday, Sept. 20, if the balance of the jewelers will do the same.

"Yours respectfully,
"August Bruder & Co."

From C. A. Wilding, president of the Tri-State Loan and Trust company, says:

"In reply to the letter of Mr. Peters in regard to closing on September 20, would say that we will gladly do so if the rest of the banks and trust companies do the same.

"Yours respectfully,
"Chas. A. Wilding, President."

Horses Coming In.

This morning seventeen horses were registered at the driving park, which the owners will rest up for the events of next week, having decided that the big purses offered by the association will justify them in getting their horses into the best possible trim for the meeting.

Some of the merchants have begun to decorate their booths in art hall and a postoffice sub-station and a telephone for the use of the public will be put in for the fair.

TELEPHONE MEN TO MEET.

Directors to Consider Wire Question and Give Answer.

A meeting of the directors of the Home Telephone and Telegraph company was called for 4 o'clock this afternoon at which the question of permitting the city to string wires on the company's poles was up for consideration. It was arranged that as soon as action had been taken it was to be reported to the city officials by Assistant Secretary George T. Fox.

MACHINISTS IN CONVENTION.

Annual Meeting of International Association at St. Louis.

St. Louis, Sept. 9.—The first session of the twelfth biennial convention of the International Association of Machinists was held here today. Among the matters of importance to be discussed are the questions of strengthening the financial system of the order, which has a membership of more than 100,000, and the problem of shorter hours.

WHERE, O, WHERE IS HEIDELBACH?

Second Failure Follows Mysterious Disappearance of Cincinnati Man.

Cincinnati, O., Sept. 9.—A second collapse followed the mysterious disappearance of Seward Heidelbach in New York, when Henry S. Fechheimer was today appointed receiver for the Ladies' Tailoring company, a $100,000 corporation in which Heidelbach was largely interested. As with the receivership for the Fabian Manufacturing company, which first suffered from his disappearance, the Ladies' Tailoring company was declared to be solvent although suffering a loss of credit because of Heidelbach's actions. The assets are estimated at $45,000 and liabilities $30,000.

WEDDING ETIQUETTE.

When a bride is married in a traveling dress the number of bridesmaids is generally limited to one.

If the happy couple go off straight from the church friends do not expect to be invited to a reception.

Only the nearest relatives and a few intimate friends receive invitations to the reception if it is to be a small one.

The custom of proposing healths at the wedding breakfast, or tea, has almost died out. In any case, only those of the bride, bridegroom and bridesmaids are proposed.

The bride provides her trousseau and her presents to the bridegroom. These are her only expenses.

The father of the bride pays for flowers to decorate the church if any are used. He also pays the choir if the service is a musical one, and provides the carpet and awning that are used on the pathway to the church door, says Home Chat.

The bridegroom buys the bride's flowers and pays for the carriage in which he takes his wife away. He also pays the clergyman's fee, and gives a present to each bridesmaid.

New Zealand has set aside 9,000,000 acres of land for endowment for the purpose of education and old age pensions. Custom duties have been reduced on necessaries of life, and increased in other lines to protect industries.

MRS. EMERSON ABBOTT DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

John Smith Drops Dead From Heart Trouble—Other Deaths.

Mrs. Mary Abbott, wife of Emerson Abbott, died at 12:30 o'clock this afternoon at the family home, 1011 Maumee avenue, after an extended illness. Death was due to tuberculosis. The bereaved young husband is a brakeman on the Pennsylvania railroad.

Mrs. Abbott's age was 29 years. She was born at Columbia City, united in marriage there and removed with her husband to Fort Wayne four years ago. In addition to the husband there are two sisters and a brother surviving—Mrs. Phoebe Coller, of Columbia City; Mrs. Dollie Hoover, of Fort Wayne, and Bigelow Ramp, of Columbia City.

Brief funeral services from the residence at 10 o'clock tomorrow. The remains will then be taken to Columbia City, where funeral services will be held Wednesday at 10 o'clock.

RAINEY.

Mrs. Maggie Rainey, 46 years of age, died Sunday at her home, 1118 Polk street, after an extended illness, and death was due to a complication of diseases.

Mrs. Rainey had been a resident of Fort Wayne since 1889, coming from Canada, and had borne her protracted suffering with patient fortitude. Surviving relatives include the husband and six children—Frank H., Albert E., Harry W., Ray M., Stella M. and Hazel B. Rainey.

Funeral services from the residence Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Mrs. Rainey was the wife of John Rainey, who is an engineer for the Trinidad Paving company.

SMITH.

John Smith, long an employe of the Brown Trucking company, dropped dead in the barn of the company on Holman street at 6:40 o'clock Saturday evening, and Coroner Stults, who viewed the remains, gave it as his finding that death had been due to heart failure.

Smith had worked as usual on Saturday, eaten supper at his boarding place, 1317 Lafayette street, and returned to the barn as was his custom to see that his team was properly cared for. It was while walking through the barn with August Borgman that Smith suddenly grasped Mr. Borgman by the arm, exclaimed "Oh, Gus," and sank lifeless to the floor. A physician who was immediately summoned found Smith beyond aid.

The remains will be shipped this evening to Auburn, where the deceased leaves a wife, two daughters, a sister and three brothers, and the funeral services will occur at that city.

ROOSEVELT TO RUN AGAIN.

Son-in-Law Longworth Says Hearty Call Might Bring Him

New York, Sept. 9.—A dispatch from Honolulu to the American quotes Congressman Longworth, who has just sailed from that port for San Francisco, as saying:

"President Roosevelt will not become a candidate for renomination unless the entire country demands it. He has firmly made up his mind to stick to this course and only a more widespread demand for him to accept the nomination will alter his determination."

CITY SCHOOLS BEGIN WORK OF THE NEW YEAR

Assignments as Made to the Big Corps of Instructors.

The Fort Wayne public schools today began the work of the new school year, and thousands of young folk turned from vacation joys to the sterner tasks of the schoolroom. Anything like an accurate estimate of the attendance is impossible until returns have been received from all the ward schools, but in the opinion of school officials the total is considerably above the figures at the opening of school a year ago.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Almond Cut—One-half pound of almonds cut up, not chopped; one-half pound of butter; one-quarter pound of sugar; three eggs; (take one whole egg and two yolks), flour enough to roll. The firm of Simmons & Dailey is chief counsel for Mrs. LaPointe. As she has no means for fighting her case the court will have to make an appointment of attorneys and the county will have to pay the bill, but the court will doubtless name the attorneys for whom Mrs. LaPointe asked. The case will not be tried this term.

Fort Wayne saloonkeepers appear to have come to the conclusion that the activity of the Good Citizenship league was a mere spasm. Time to show 'em.

Senator Foraker complains that the war on him was instigated and fomented by a man who wants his job. Might be well for him to specify which job. A seat in the senate is one thing and a hawkeye lookout for a chance to run for president is another.

Milk dealers hereabouts should at least take time to reflect that the public that buys their milk has some degree of interest in the kind of milk it buys. Certainly there can be no objection to measures that will give assurance of rational cleanliness. Some dairymen will guarantee this without regulation. Others will not under any circumstances they find it possible to set aside.

A Texas cotton broker, put out of business by a new law in his state, went to New York and got busy. He was a bull and shortly chased other bulls to the bear pit and later stampeded the whole outfit to the tall timber. He has cleaned up a million or two and is in line for other millions. Of no special moment is this incident to the public generally, save as showing that now and then a man from the wooly and untamed can go down east and give the gambling crowd something new in the fashion of fleece clipping.

Young Kermit Roosevelt beat a hasty retreat, or more strictly speaking, made a skedaddle from the camp of the troopers with whom he was making a long overland march to Fort Sheridan. Wasn't afraid of the fatigues of the march and bivouac or of the foe in front. Silly women drove him to it by their incontinent admiration. Looks like a wise lad. May have had a fear that some clinging "affinity" or soul-chum or somethingof the sort would get a clutch on him. You never can tell and it's better to play safe.

Some days ago it was announced that Indianapolis brewers and brewery agents, taking counsel of the rapid spread of temperance sentiment, had taken steps to get together in a "gentlemen's argeement" for the purpose of forcing saloonkeepers to observe the Sunday law. In the abstract the thing looked good. It now appears that the move was either abortive or never had good faith behind it. At all events, Indianapolis newspapers say the saloonists got a quiet tip from certain breweries to go ahead with the Sunday business as usual. From all outward indications it probably may be accepted as the thing most likely that the breweries and saloonkeepers in the larger cities will not yield to the growing sentiment for law enforcement until they are compelled to do so. And that time will come sooner or later. The reform wave will hit the cities with ample force in due time and it will be found that the remonstrance law can be employed there with quite as much success as in the country and the smaller towns and cities.

A Washington correspondent goes at some length to explain that Mr. Bryan is not a candidate for the democratic nomination in the sense of seeking it and that if next year the party believes it has a stronger man than himself to put forward Mr. Bryan will cheerfully acquiesce in the party judgment. Takes no proof to establish that. Nothing has been clearer for the past six months than that Mr. Bryan is entirely in the hands of the democratic party—willing to lead again if called and ready to follow and to fight if the party believes it has a better. That Mr. Bryan will be the nominee appears certain beyond peradventure of a doubt. There is no other democrat who can enthuse the ranks and so give promise of victory. Talk of Chanler, of New York, or Johnson, of Minnesota, or at this time even of Folk, of Missouri, is so much idle twaddle. As matters stand today Bryan is the nominee. The rank and file of the democracy will not again stand by and participate in or acquiesce in the strategic blunder of three years ago. Judge Parker is a fine, clean, able man of splendid courage and entire fitness for the presidency. But the wrong crowd brought about his nomination. Under better circumstances Judge Parker would have made a fine contest and if not elected would at least have come out with a vastly better showing than of having been the worst defeated man in the history of the presidency.

Theodore E. Burton, who has successfully run for congress some half dozen times, has been nominated by the Cleveland republicans to beat Tom L. Johnson for mayor. Congressman Burton is a man of splendid abilities and immensely popular. Doubtless he is the strongest man the republicans can find to attempt the trick. But it is doubtful if even Burton will be able to turn away from Tom Johnson enough of the voters who believe in him to achieve a republican victory. The millionaire mayor has made good. He has waged successful war against the big traction combine there and given the people what is rated as the best urban traction service in the United States. He has purified municipal politics and reformed municipal government. He has given the city of Cleveland a more wholesome regime of law enforcement than it had known previous to his administrations. There is nothing against him upon which Congressman Burton can wage a fight save that he is a democrat, whereas Cleveland is normally, with party lines sharply drawn, a republican city.

FRIENDS OF CHILDREN.

Lutheran Society Held Picnic at Concordia College Grove.

There was a very large attendance at the annual festival of the Lutheran Children's Friend society held Sunday at Concordia college grove, and the feature of the day was a stirring sermon by Rev. H. Jaus, of Williams, who dwelt eloquently upon the work of the society in providing homes for the homeless children.

Refreshments were served by the ladies of the society, and during the day a substantial collection was taken to aid in the work of the organization.

The Retail Merchants' association will hold an important meeting at the Commercial club rooms this evening at 8 o'clock sharp, and there will be an election of officers for the coming year.

A feature of the occasion will be the joining of the butchers' association with the general body, and a smoker will celebrate the prosperity of the big organization.

CITY BREVITIES.

The boiler in a big White steamer automobile driven by Simon Ackerman, sprung a leak while on the Huntertown road yesterday and the heavy steam pressure was released with a tremendous noise, but with little damage. The party, which included Mr. and Mrs. Ackerman and Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Pottlitzer, chartered a carriage to reach a trolley line and came home by electric car.

What The Sentinel Had to Say About Persons and Events Twenty-Five Years Ago.

The work of filling up the old canal bed is being pushed rapidly.

John Bostick has taken a clerical position with the Shoe Manufacturers' union.

Ed Lukens has accepted a position with John A. Hamlin's Wizard Oil combination.

C. D. Porter, of Geneva, has purchased of Jones & Bradley the Fairfield avenue drug store.

League base ball scores received every evening at Heilbroner's cigar stand, 10 West Berry street.

The Sentinel is under obligations for favors to Louis Schroeder, the accurate scorer at all base ball matches.

The county surveyor this morning commenced the survey of a gravel road west of the city along the Huntington and Liberty Mills road.

The Medical college of Fort Wayne, on Broadway, has opened a free dispensary, which will be open during the session for the treatment of those who are unable to pay for medicine and medical attendance.

Hon. Wesley C. Glasgow, of Lagrange, is in the city today. Mr. Glasgow admits that he has no hope of beating Judge Lowry in the race for congress.

Night before last Minnie Maddern opened the Lafayette opera house to an immense audience. She plays here during the season in "Fogg's Ferry," written by C. E. Callahan, of the Cincinati press. Miss Maddern is a daughter of the late T. W. Davey, well known here as a theatrical manager.

The statement that the late session of the grand jury resulted in more indictments and more witnesses examined than any previous session of that body in the county is incorrect. Several grand juries have returned over one hundred indictments, and in one case alone, under Prosecutor Hench's regime, over one hundred witnesses were subpoenaed.

WILLIAM GOODMAN GETS TO BE BAD MAN WITH JAG

Wouldn't Go Home When He Had a Chance—City Court Docket.

William Goodman lives up to his name all right when he is sober, but when he gets full he refuses to be good and the fact that he got bad Saturday night caused him to be in the city court today for drunkenness, where he was let go under a suspended fine of $5 and costs.

He also got a lot of advice and was told that the next time he gets into the court for drunkenness he will get $25 and costs and the next raise after that will be $100 and thirty days. He would not go home Saturday night when the policemen advised him to and got "sassy" on the hands of Patrolman Degitz.

Case Continued.

Frank "Whitey" Worten and Earl Arnold, who caused a small riot at the transfer corner Sunday night in an altercation with Frank Sarlar, Syrian vender, had their cases continued until Thursday morning and both gave bond for their appearance.

Both men began by annoying the Syrian and finally one of them struck him and both ran. The police were called and their appearance and subsequent chase after the prisoners attracted a crowd that almost blocked the corner. Both men have been in trouble repeatedly before.

The Other Cases.

Seven men and women arrested in a raid on an East Main street rooming house gave fictitious names and were fined $5 and costs each.

George Smith, who said he was assaulted, was fined $1 and costs, and the case against Joe Attalli, accused of assaulting him, was continued.

Lemuel Wormcastle, charged with criminal intimacy with Margaret Ackerman, who is of unsound mind, was held until tomorrow under a bond of $500.

John Funk was fined $5 and costs for drunkenness, and the case of loitering against James Shaw was dismissed.

PASTOR BIDS FAREWELL.

Rev. J. M. Canse Delivers Final Sermon at Simpson M. E. Church.

Gathered about the altar at Simpson M. E. church Sunday evening at the close of the farewell sermon of Rev. J. M. Canse, who had chosen for his theme, "Turning Points," the entire congregation voiced in bended knee a touching adieu to the pastor, who will leave at once to take up pastoral work in the far west.

The service was deeply impressive, and it attested eloquently the esteem and regard in which Rev. Mr. Canse is held by his Fort Wayne congregation. His successor, Rev. L. M. Edwards, will arrive in a few days from Westfield, Ind.

THE BEST PROOF of the merits of any bank is the length of time that they are allowed to carry large accounts.

AUBURN NEWS.

(Special Correspondence of The Sentinel.)

Auburn, Ind., Sept. 9.—Phone your items to Trentman's news stand.

Charles E. McDonald, one of the best known writers on the Auburn Daily Dispatch and later with the Courier, has resigned and packed his household goods to move to Lincolnville, Ill.

Auburn is to have a series of temperance lectures this week. Mrs. R. J. Trego, national W. C. T. U. evangelist, will begin Wednesday afternoon and evening at the Baptist church; on Thursday evening at the M. E. church and on Friday evening at the Lutheran church. The Kittles band will be here, and teh pioneer reunion will give a series of events that will be of unusual interest.

Rev. Montgomery May, of Chrisman, Ill., filled the Presbyterian pulpit yesterday. The church is without a pastor and Rev. May is a prospective applicant for the same.

Dr. Hines and family returned Sunday evening from an outing at Tippecanoe lake, near Warsaw.

The Young People's societies of the different denominations held a union meeting at the aptist church last evening and the attendance was extremely large. The excellent musical program had been prepared, especially the one by Miss Henrietta Gumm.

The Auburn Automobile company has been advised of a record run made last week by a party of Columbia City people with one of the 1907 Auburn cars, from Columbia City to Cincinnati, Ohio, 213 miles in 11 hours. This record certainly speaks well of the Auburn cars.

Remember the Sentinel has a complaint bureau. Address J. C. Schlegel at Garrett: Bell Phone 199 W.

Louis Gunder, the B. & O. fireman has returned from a week's visit at Angola.

Rev. Kohlmeier and family returned to Edgerton after a very delightful visit.

Don't forget that the Sentinel is still doing business.

GARRETT NEWS.

(Call Bell Phone 199 W. for the Sentinel.)

(Special Correspondence of The Sentinel.)

Garrett, Ind., Sept. 9.—The promotion of John Connors to the position of night yardmaster of the B. & O. at this point comes as a recognition of his long and faithful service with the company, and also that of M. H. Sweeney, the day yardmaster at this point. Mr. Sweeney is a native of Tiffin, Ohio. As a boy he watched the trains as they went by his home on the Old Mad River road and later the B. & O. His first initiation into railroad life was by the train-jumping method, finally drifting into the work. His first employment was as a brakeman on the B. & O. at Tiffin, in September, 1881. In 1884 he was promoted to the position of freight conductor and two years later as a passenger conductor. In 1890 he was sent to North Baltimore, Ohio, as yardmaster and a year afterward came to Garrett as night yardmaster, which position he held for five years, and eleven years ago he was promoted to day yardmaster, which position he now holds. Mr. Connors is also a native of the Buckeye state by birth, his earlier life being spent at Defiance, Ohio. In 1882 he took employment with the B. & O. as a section man, working on the Chicago division. In 1884 he was given the position of brakeman, with his home at Garrett. In 1886 he was promoted to be a freight conductor and in May, 1893, a passenger conductor and during the world's fair in 1893 had charge of the company's trains in and out of Chicago. In 1894, while acting as a freight conductor, in making a coupling, he had his left hand cut off, which necessitated his retirement from work on the road. He was given the position of chief clerk in the yard offices in this city, and has served continuously since that time, until Aug. 22nd last, when he was appointed night yardmaster. In his capacity as chief clerk in the yard office he has acted as both day and night yardmaster.

Miss Mollie Schudel has resigned her position as chief operator for the Central Union Telephone company here and Miss Lottie Wolford has been appointed in her stead. Miss Schudel goes to a very lucrative position in Fort Wayne. Miss Wolford has been an employe of the Bell company for a few years and is thoroughly fitted for the position.

Rev. P. E. Powell delivered a very forceful sermon on "The Social Side of the Lord's Supper," last Sunday. Next Sunday is communion Sunday and Dr. C. U. Wade, the presiding elder of the Fort Wayne district, will be present and preach.

Leroy T. Beeber has just finished his four years appreticeship in the B. & O. shops as a tinner and pipefitter and is now a full-fledged mechanic. He is the son G. D. Beeber, the well known watchman at the Randolph street crossing.

Frank Kircher reports that his horse "Billy" Foster was in the races at Pittsburg last Thursday in the most hotly contested race of the season. Flying Jim won the race but "Billy" Foster came in for a division of the other money.

Mrs. Ed Hammers entertained a party of friends at her home a few evening ago in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon, of Newark, Ohio

YOUD SECOND BEST.

It is sad that so many of us are content with our second best. We are always going to do better. We have vague ideas as to the great things we will do, but that is as far as we get.

Before you go to bed tonight think over your day. If you had it to live over again, would you spend it just as you have done?

Most of us would not. Well, we still have tomorrow.

No matter how well you do anything, try to do it better. Don't be satisfied with anything but the very best that you are capable of.

FRIED ONIONS

Slice rather large white onions, soak in milk ten minutes, then drain, dip in flour and immerse in boiling fat hot enough to brown the onions instantly. A wire basket is a great convenience for frying. The moment the slices are crisped remove. If allowed to cook five or six minutes the slices cannot be kept whole. If you have no frying basket, take out with the skimmer, drain on brown paper. Cooked in this way the onions will be firm yet well cooked and delicious. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and serve.

Hart's Passed Ball Does the Damage—Naps and Browns Split.

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 9.—In the ninth inning of the game with two men down and the White Sox leading by a score of 3 to 2, Hub Hart let a low ball get through his mitts and Cobb, who was on third, got over with the run that tied the score. Then Wild Bill Donovan worked his speed clutch of a couple of notches in the gloaming and put the Sox out without a tally. The score:

BEACH PARKS BID FOR GAME BUT LOCALS ANNEX IT

Shamrocks Clean Up the Cleveland Crowd in Good Shape.

The Slavonic slabbist depended upon to put a crimp into the winning record of the Fort Wayne Shamrocks joined out into salaried company last week so Jimmy Cahill contracted with an Ohio-Pennsylvania league pitcher to punish Mart Cleary's outfit and, admitting he started like he intended to pass his manager the merchandise, the pitcher went to the bad before the close and the Beach Parks took back to Cleveland admirers and fellow athletes another bundle of excuses. The score was nine to four and was copped in a game in which the fielding was wobbly.

Taylor was the lad brought over by Cahill in place of Jahnke, who was slated. He had a world of steam but the locals liked that and counting scratches and all they annexed fourteen hits for the occasion. Two-dollar offerings in the way of a Sunday out of town kept the crowd down and for the first time in two months the reserve chairs were not needed in the grand stand.

Jack Smith rapped the session to order with a single to center, moved on "Doc" Koon's safe hunt and scored when Blanchard failed to hold a throw to second to stop the "Mustang." Cahill's hired men made a bid in the second which started when Gage slopped Kimmerling's grounder, Furma contributed a safe hunt, Cahill moved both up with a sacrifice. Then big Kimmerling got away with the pitch and pilfered home. Reese got a base on balls and George Beach let him and Furma in with a wild throw. This was about all for the visitors until the fifth when they hooked up on Taylor's hit, a sacrifice and a punk drive by Blanchard.

Beach opened the fourth with a clean bingle to left, got second when Henderson booted Hoffer's bunt but went out at third on Albert's grounder. Jack Smith lammed the bulb to right field bank and it snuggled safely out of sight until the three runners covered the circuit. Another was added to the collection and broke the tie in the seventh when Centilvre gave Fowler a chance that was too warm to handle, got second on Erickson's offering and went the rounds on two outs.

The locals broke into the lead in the eighth with four tallies on hits by Hoffer, Alberts, Smith, Koons and Centilvre and a wild throw by Henderson. Two double plays were among the star numbers of the locals and the errors were not costly. The aggregation will be back in a week with a stronger team as Manager Cahill wants at least one victory in Fort Wayne. The score:

VISITORS WIN GOLF MATCH.

The Indianapolis golfers who spent the day as guests of local players at the Golf club on Saturday won the match, though the contest was close and exciting. Members of the Highland club, composed the team and their number included Diddle, the star player who holds the state championship. Mr. Diddle was matched with W. F. Peters and their rounds were followed by an exciting gallery. Mr. Diddle made the best medal score of his team, eighty-two for the eighteen holes. Mr. Peters put up a good game, losing by one hole and one stroke.

The Best on the Market.

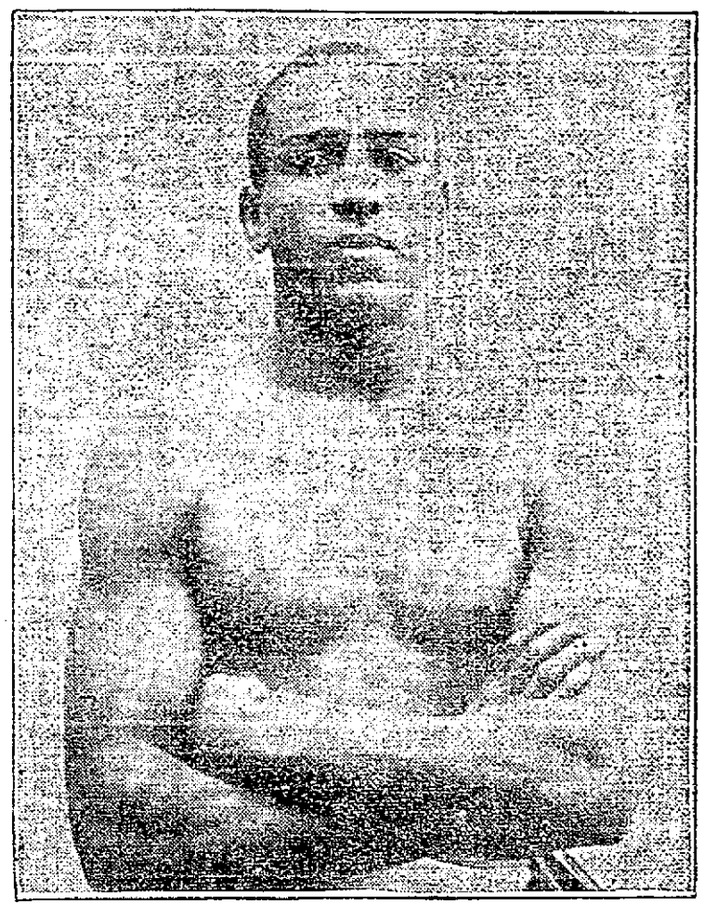
For many years Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has constantly gained in favor and popularity until it is now one of the most staple medicines in use and has an enormous sale. It is intended especially for acute throat and lung diseases, such as coughs, colds and croup, and can always be depended upon. It is pleasant and safe to take and is undoubtedly the best in the market for the purpose for which it is intended. Sold by all druggists.

A Mohammedan army schoolmaster has addressed a loyal appeal to the native army in India pointing out that as soon as common sense is exercised the accusations against the Indian government fall to the ground.

Had Tetter for Thirty Years.

I have suffered with tetter for thirty years and have tried almost countless remedies with little, if any, relief. Three boxes of Chamberlain's Salve cured me. It was a torture. It breaks out a little sometimes, but nothing to wha. it used to do.—D. H. Beach, Midland City, Ala. Chamberlain's Salve is for sale by all druggists.

Colored Champion Who Battles Today To Hold His Title



JOE GANS.

GANS AND BRITT MEET THIS AFTERNOON FOR BATTLE

Britt Braces Up in the Betting and Looks to Have a Fair Chance.

HOW THE FIGHTERS COMPARE

Gans.		Britt.
5 ft. 6¼ in.	Height.	5 ft. 6 in
71 inches	Reach	65 inches
133 pounds	Weight	133 pounds
38 inches	Chest	39½ inches
13½ inches	Biceps	13 inches
6¾ inches	Wrist	6½ inches
8½ inches	Wrist	8½ inches
20½ inches	Thigh	20 inches
13½ inches	Calf	13 inches
8½ inches	Ankle	7½ inches

San Francisco, Sept. 9.—Indications that betting would become heavy on the Gans and Britt fight were upheld yesterday when many speculators took advantage of the holiday to cross to San Rafael and wager in the rooms there on the outcome. Fluctuations in odds were reported throughout the day, and it seemed likely that Gans may not be so short-priced a favorite when he enters the ring this afternoon.

There is a strong local feeling that Britt will be the winner, and Willus Britt said yesterday that his party and the Corbett faction would wager heavily on Jimmy, and many of the Seattle bookmakers who have come down to see the bout will also bet on the California man.

Britt Well Supported.

While opinions printed in a local paper yesterday morning, collected by telegraph from all over the country, show that Gans is the choice, this does not seem to have deterred the Britt element from putting their money on him. Indications last night seemed to point to the fact that both men will be in good shape when they enter the ring and that each will make the weight, although neither will have much margin to spare.

Both Gans and Britt spent the day very quietly and did not take any heavier exercise than long walks, Gans trudging briskly for about five miles through the sandy roads back of Croll's resort. Gans smiled slowly when asked for an opinion on the outcome and responded that he thought he would win by a knock-out, but that the length of the fight would depend on when he got a good chance. Willus and Jimmy Britt both expressed confidence in the go coming their way.

Battling Nelson on Hand.

Battling Nelson is in town and will challenge the winner tonight. Tom Corbett, who is now in charge of the cafe formerly run by Harry Corbett, says that the bulk of the play in his place has been on Britt, but that the Gans money, left there by bookmakers and others who wish to back the champion, exceeds the wagers in quantity.

Referee Welch has told the men to be on hand at 1:30, so that they can be weighed and be at the ringside by 2 o'clock this afternoon. The bout is expected to commence about 2:30, const time. The seats have already been nearly all disposed of. Promise is for one of the largest houses of the year.

Betting on the bout took a switch in favor of Britt late last night, to the extent of half a point, going from 6 to 10 to 13 to 20.

The fight is a puzzle to many ring followers. While Gans is a topheavy favorite with the real bettors, reports of Britt's wonderful improvement and hints of the champion's retrogradation have caused many to believe that the native son will duplicate his performance against Nelson and win the laurel of the lightweight division.

Gans, however, is the logical choice for the victory. The colored ring whirlwind is the fighter that has everything. Cool at all times and the most sagacious of ring generals, he combines the punch of a Jeffries with the cleverness of a Corbett. He probably has little on Britt in the matter of fancy boxing, but there is no disputing the fact that he has the greater punishing power and has shown ability to take more punishment without flinching.

Bout Hinges on Gans' Vitality.

The only question on today's fight to the real student of ring affairs is "Has Gans' vitality been impaired in his many battles?" If this is answered in the affirmative, Britt may win the battle—if in the negative there should be but one outcome to a square battle.

Betting was brisk on the battle. The heavy plungers have forced the price down half a point, Gans now being favorite at odds of 10 to 6½. Both fighters are practically at the required weight and in perfect condition. The articles call for a twenty-round contest, to be fought under straight Marquis of Queensbury rules. Each must weigh 133 pounds or under, stripped, and be ready to enter the ring at 2 o'clock sharp. Jack Welsh will referee and George Harding will be official time-keeper.

Britt will be seconded by Spider Kelly, Tiv. Kreling and Frank Rafael. Alvin King will have charge of affairs in Gans' corner, with Ben Selig, Young Peter Jackson, Kid North and Willie Keefe as assistants.

THE WHEELS OF ILLUSION.
By LEO CRANE.

THERE was the dirty-looking, drab little tent to begin with. A woman stood at a small fire near it, cooking something. Beside the tent was a moth-eaten brown bear, chained to a stake, the chain caught through a ring in his nose. Two very wide-eyed boys were surveying the bear, though they kept at a safe distance. Once, when the bear made a sudden movement, lumbering about and shaking the chain, the two boys scampered away uttering exclamations of fright; but, boy-like, they soon returned, and silently, curiously, again took up an intent survey of its astrakhan-looking back.

The bear was not a pleasant object at all. At some time in the past a kettle of boiling water had helped remove goodly patches of his fur, leaving blotches of purplish skin showing through.

"Tony—he will not hurt," assured the woman, nodding at the youngsters. They transferred for a moment their curiosity to her. She was pleasant enough, with bright, bead-like eyes of jet black, and a glow in each cheek which was pretty, but not healthful. Before returning to the cooking, she looked all about, a slight frown of anxiety coming to her face. She called:

"Francesca! Where are you, carissima?"

A second after there came a little silver shout, and a girl, perhaps nine, perhaps twelve years old, came up to the fire, dancing in the exuberance of youthful happiness.

"Where have you been?" asked the woman.

"With Padron Bertoldi—we are faggot-gathering——"

"You must not stray from him, Francesca—no."

"No, indeed," repeated the child, the reflection of her mother's mood casting its shadow over her merriment. The two boys regarded the little girl with even greater interest than they had the bear. What a fine life to lead! they thought. The daughter of a showman—a part of the very show itself, for she danced! One of the boys had seen her dance. He had an advantage of the other. She was pretty, black-haired, with large, tender eyes, and lips which curved into delicate loveliness.

"Her name is Francesca," whispered the unfortunate boy, nudging his comrade. The second little fellow nodded impatiently. They had turned around to look, and the bear in another instant was loudly snuffing at their calves. With a wild cry of fear the two boys sprang off beyond the chain's length. The little girl laughed at them merrily. This made one of the boys angry, because he always wished to have some sort of advantage of his partner in fun. He had seen the girl dance, and he should have liked to appear brave in her sight.

"Tony is a good bear," said the girl, smiling at them. "He will not hurt you," and she went up to the uncouth creature, putting her arms about its neck. "Tony is a goodie, goodie," she said. Tony, on his part, seemed to appreciate all this. He promptly sat up on his haunches and made a fierce grimace, showing his teeth, at which the boys gasped.

"Why, he's laughing," said the girl gravely, tapping the bear on the nose.

She had none of that shyness common to children of her age. She went to the boys, and, taking their hands, said prettily:

"Come, we will go to Padron Bertoldi, and he will tell us a story. Have you ever been to Roma—Roma?"

"Never," replied the boys in chorus. The boy with the slight advantage said nothing more, but the other one asked immediately: "Roma?—where is it?"

"Where the Pope lives," explained the girl, simply, her eyes regarding him so closely that he felt confused.

"Say—you mean Rome," interrupted the older boy.

"No, she doesn't mean anything of the kind," protested his chum, feeling that a fight would distinguish him somewhat.

"Oh! yes, I do," the girl hastened to say; "only Padron Bertoldi calls it Roma. It is very pretty that way."

To redeem himself, the boy began to talk quickly, his eyes agleam with an idea.

"There's a picture in my geography," he said.

"Of Roma?" cried the little girl, clapping her hands.

"Sure——I'll tear it out for you," stammered the boy in a burst of good-will and bravado. "I'll get a licking for it, but I won't mind that."

"Will you—won't you——" hesitated the girl. Then seeing a man come from the wood close by, she pulled them by the hands. "Now we can have Padron Bertoldi tell us a story. He was born in Roma. It is very beautiful there, with marble houses and streets and fountains, and—he will tell us—Oh! Padron Bertoldi!——"

The man was rather over middle age. He was perhaps fifty-five. His face was wrinkled and his shoulders bent a trifle, yet there was something supple about him. He walked with a light step and his smile had much humor in it. One of the boys whispered:

"The clown—that's him!——"

Padron Bertoldi was the clown, indeed. He could make Tony the bear do tricks, and, sometimes, when Tony was feeling pleasant, they would waltz together, if the collection was a good one. Giuseppe Valdroni ran the show. He was Francesca's father, a slight fellow, who juggled knives and eggs, and who could produce a rabbit from almost nothing or anywhere. He also ate fire, which was a marvelous thing to see. This even puzzled and worried Francesca. She had tried it herself once, and there could yet be seen the scar of a burn at her mouth.

"Oh! Padron Bertoldi, do tell us——"

The old man put down his wood and regarded the boys gravely. They could see where the paint had roughened his face, and the older one thought how much nicer he looked in the powder and loose white garments of the clown, with the red bounding tassel on his head, and the two green moons painted over his eyes. Padron Bertoldi could be a funny fellow when he chose.

"Ah! Francesca mine, they have been making love to you?" The two boys were visibly astonished and very much confused while the old man had his laugh. "Francesca, you must not keess every boy you meet."

"Padron Bertoldi——" she protested sweetly.

"Some day you will—Ah!—Ah! Well, now about Roma, must I tell you? It is a land where all good boys and girl go. No bad children are allowed within the gates, so you must be very good, and say your rosary, Francesca."

The little girl looked solemnly down.

"Bertoldi!" called the woman at the fire. "The lamps need oil. How shall we see to-night if you do not fill them?"

He winked at the boys and, with a funny shake of his head, hurried away.

"Francesca!" called the woman. It was getting to be twilight. The little girl turned away from the boy and started toward the tent. The smaller boy, in a burst of genuine bravery, ran after.

"Will you—will you dance to-night, Francesca?" he asked.

"Of course; I dance every night," she answered, and then with a little sigh: "I am very tired some nights——"

"Francesca!" shrilled the woman.

"You did not kiss me, Francesca," said the boy, blushing.

She laughed the little silvery laugh, and kissed her hand to him. He watched her until she disappeared into the tent. There was a charm about the dirty drab-colored canopy and the golden-toned fire before it. The bear, too, was growing hazy in the ripening dusk, and he loomed up as some monster of a fairy tale, vague, terrifying. The boy wondered if he were but a boy in a fairy tale, for he had talked with a real clown, had been snuffed at by a great bear with furry patches, and a sweet little princess had kissed her hand to him. Then the chain rattled, and with one accord they sped off homeward.

GIUSEPPE THREW UP HIS HANDS IN A GESTURE OF DESPAIR.

"Say!" called the older one, "you aren't going to tear your geography?"

"What you bet I ain't?" challenged the other, defiantly.

* * * * * * * * *

In the evenings, when the old lamps were casting each its circle of lurid amber, these strange folk of the road would give their show for the villagers. Giuseppe would make his eggs and knives whirl and glitter marvelously in the air. Padron Bertoldi would caper in his dress of loose white stuff, and do merry tricks with a hoop upon the rim of which were bells. Padron Bertoldi could also stand, and even walk, upon his hands. This was a feat, truly. He would ascend a short flight of steps and descend again, all the while on his hands, his legs dangling in the air. The woman played queer, haunting airs upon a zither while these things were being done. Then Francesca would dance as gracefully as a fairy with magic wings. This always interested the little boys, and made envious the girls. Tony, the bear, at the command of Padron Bertoldi, imitated this dance in a clumsy hobbling manner which never failed to make the crowd shriek with delight. And last of all would be the wonderful fire-eating of Giuseppe. Indeed, it seemed that he fairly relished the flames.

All these things attracted the village folk and impressed them. But they were honest, narrow-minded people, and they looked upon these voyagers of the road as a curious lot worthy to be let alone. Giuseppe received full credit for his strength, black hair and sallow complexion.

"Watch about ye at night, for them Italians ain't to be trusted," was the word of precaution to those who were to be late in home-coming.

The two little fellows who were enamored of Francesca received very bad marks in school, because she and not the arithmetic occupied their minds. When evening came they begged permission to attend the gathering outside the tent, where some preliminary effects were given free as a whet to the appetite of the curious. The boy with the contempt for his geography and its pictorial contents was the son of Doctor Montfarling, who lived in the white house beyond the town. So graphic was Billy's description of the show's beauties that night at dinner, and so long continued were his pleadings to be present, that the Doctor good-humoredly ordered his motor car to be brought about. They went chug-chugging into and through the village to where the tent, now a bloated heap of shadows distorted by the fire, was raised. From it came softly the wild, weird sounds of the zither.

There was something in this combination of stilly night and this gathering of a strange people, the colors of their dress, the monotonous cadence of the music, the peculiar intonation of their cries, alluring and fantastic, which, blending as it did in an atmosphere of wavering yellow light and translucent shadow, made a picture fascinating and yet apart. Perhaps it was the mystery of Giuseppe's fire-eating, the flames coming from his throat and lighting his swarthy face, the sparks clinging to his coarse black hair, which, after the amusing pranks of Padron Bertoldi and his bear, and the charm of little Francesca, threw into the crowd a touch of the supernatural, and changed in a single moment their appreciative clamor of delight to a hush of doubtful awe. They murmured among themselves, and left the tent muttering against this thing. The ignorant ask for little explanation. They see, they consider in their stupid way, they refuse to simplify. This state of anxiety is worse than actual belief. Those of intense faith are not dangerous. It is the one who suspects, yet who is beyond lucid argument, who trembles and wavers in the mazes of his own doubt, who eventually plunges either into fanaticism or persecution.

The crowd had thinned out, and was fast choosing its several ways homeward. Doctor Montfarling, about to follow his boy to the motor car, felt his arm pulled, and, looking around, saw the Italian, Giuseppe. There was in the man's dark eyes the intense supplication of a dumb animal in pain.

"I asked them—they tell me you a doctaire?—Yes?—Zee leetle child, eet—is seek."

The doctor gazed at him suspiciously. "You mean the little one that danced?" he asked. Giuseppe nodded.

"Mooch seek——" he said in reply. "She dance, she fall down like she is to be dead."

"Where is she now?"

"In zee tent—so, come."

Without further parley, Montfarling caught the hand of his son and followed the man. Billy was not without a quaver of hesitation as they went into the gloomy recesses of the tent. Once he had longed to view the mysteries of that inner place which had always been hidden by a most annoying flap, the instant slapping to of which had perplexed him, but now he was not so eager, for without was the black night and the people had gone. An oil light was burning, flaring its yellow smudge here and there as the draught took it. The rough walls of the tent hung down in heavy bulges. Upon a cot lay the child, her face flushed in the glow of fever, her lips moving. Beside sat the woman, no longer filled with music, her chin on her hand. She regarded the doctor in a pathetic way. The little girl saw the boy, and said sharply, impatiently:

"Have you brought it for me, my Roma?"

Then it seemed she immediately forgot the question, but not the subject. She repeated softly, her lips forming the one word: "Roma—Roma——"

"The child is ill—very ill," commented Montfarling.

At once he thrust Billy boy out into the gloom of the larger tent. He drew Giuseppe aside, saying:

"This is a serious matter, my man. She must have attention, careful treatment. She is very sick."

"Ver' seek," mumbled Giuseppe helplessly.

The woman's face flushed a whole litany of beseeching prayers. Padron Bertoldi came in at that moment. He had heard the words. His face, all powdered and redlined as it was, presented a perfect tragedy.

"Roma——" said the child plaintively.

"Yes, yes," promised Padron Bertoldi, gently, "sometime——"

"Now!" persisted the child.

"Yes, yes, carissima," he said again.

And the little girl seemed satisfied for the time.

Doctor Montfarling was troubled.

"I am afraid the village authorities will not let you stay, with the child so sick," he said.

Giuseppe threw up his hands in a gesture of despair.

"But, but what—what we must do?"

"I shall come back to-night with medicine—then, we must wait."

He went out to find Billy crouching miserably in the motor car.

"Is the little girl sick?" asked the boy.

"Very sick," grunted the doctor, turning the car around.

Chug-chugging they went up the dark road, following the broad path of the headlight with increasing speed. The soft-whirling grip of the tires on the gravel road made the only sound, and the trees slipped back in a ghostly procession of somber shapes. Billy looked back to where a pale light showed the ropes and bulk of the tent against a dim, gray sky, in which glinted two cold stars. He shivered, and then cuddled up closely to his father, saying:

"Wild she die, papa?"

"Ahem—humm——" responded the Doctor, glancing down at his forlorn son, "Well, not—perhaps."

"And she will never see Roma, then."

"What is that, Roma?" asked the father, his big voice filled with that tone in which little children take comfort. The boy broke out in a babble of explanation: "Francesca, that is her name—she told me, she wanted to see Rome. Roma, she called it. And she said the streets had marble houses, and that it was a pretty place, she said—the clown told us about it. He is a good man."

"Ah! Yes," said the Doctor, wheeling the car into the roadway of his grounds.

"Rome is in Italy, papa, isn't it? Where is that? Over the sea?"

"Sometimes——" began the Doctor, his voice softening; "often for those people, in the skies."

This the boy did not understand. He snuggled again close to the big, big man, whom he trusted.

"But you must not let her die, papa—she blew me a kiss, and I love Francesca."

"So," came the comment, in a kindly voice, all understanding.

* * * * * * * * *

When, next day, the Doctor visited the tent and its occupants, he found a scene of disconsolate confusion. Giuseppe went about as a man in a dream, loosening ropes, and, with the help of Padron Bertoldi, preparing things for a hasty removal. Only the bear, Tony, snuffed around his stake, unmindful of a grave happening. Giuseppe began a nervous expostulation:

"They have come to me—they hav' tol' me that we must not stay here. Pigs! We must take the child, she is seek, where?"

The Doctor did not know. These people lived in a tent. They were vagabonds. That they had not provided themselves with a home, and had not kept to it, was, to the people of the village, each of whom had a home and kept to it, nothing at all. These wanderers had the misfortune to contract a dangerous fever. Their speedy exit was desirable. Therefore, they had been invited to leave. Where must they go? That was not provided in the command. Did they not call the road their home?—well, there was the road. Let them accept what it could afford. He who is a vagabond must accept the penalties of vagabondage. Other men in such a crisis would have received sympathy and some consideration; but these, they merely went about the country fire-eating and playing with a bear!

The Doctor's heart went out to the unfortunates. The child was ill. And in a tent. The woman was weeping, the man went around wringing his hands. Only the clown, Padron Bertoldi, preserved his atmosphere of serious attention. Montfarling drew him aside.

"Is she your child?" he asked.

"The child of Maria and Giuseppe," the clown explained.

"Then I will tell you. She will die, unless——"

A great shading of misery was in the eyes of Padron Bertoldi. "She will die," he said to himself. "Some day I had promised to take her to that far-away place we call home, Signor. Roma—there we could be happy. These two, Maria and Giuseppe, they did not know her as me, Signor. We two, Francesca and myself, we have the sun of Italy in our hearts. I told her stories—lies. I promised her that we two would go over there some day—lies." He looked up at the Doctor, upon his face that wisdom which makes of the clown a judge. "We are all liars, Signor," he added pitifully.

"How is it that she did not like this life of yours?"

"She always tired—too much dance, too much. An' she grow very weary for Roma, where I say there is no labor, no weariness. I lie, but she a ver' pretty child, like the Virgin, Signor." Padron Bertoldi was weeping. "Giuseppe he say to her, 'dance, dance,' that he mak' money, an' he say always, 'dance, dance'——"

The Doctor frowned. Coming up the road was the village constable, an appearance of supreme authority covering him.

"These people have not gone, eh!" he said angrily, with an air of personal discomfort. "Doctor, you know it will be dangerous if they stay here."

"Then you had better leave at once, my good man," said the Doctor mildly. "You are in danger. This is fever."

"You are here," exclaimed the constable.

"I am the physician, and have duties."

The constable inflated his chest, and replied, with a pompous and ill-fitting dignity:

"I, too, have duties—I am the Law. These people must leave."

"But where can they go?" asked the Doctor, a frown coming to his face again. It was a strong face, heavily featured, calmed and rendered mobile by the experience of suffering.

"The Law should apply a remedy as do we physicians. You say, 'Go!' Very good; we say, 'Where?' These pepole are in trouble, and they have no home save this tent. You cannot ask a man to move this when he is sick. These people have no other place."

"They tell you that, but they are all liars and thieves."

Padron Bertoldi flushed. Too much humor sometimes makes of a man a savage. The Doctor sighed wearily.

"If the child could be taken to the city," he suggested to the clown. "There are hospitals, and——"

Bertoldi shrugged his shoulders. "We walk," he observed.

And when they stood again by the cot, the child was still murmuring "Roma——" as one might ask for water.

Montfarling for the moment reverted from the doctor to the man. He thought of the "Roma" in the skies, which brought his small, cuddling son to mind, and the boy's commission to him, running: "But you must not let her die, papa, for she blew me a kiss, and I love Francesca." He looked at the old man to find again a marvelous commentary upon the world's happiness, a clown weeping. He thought of other dancers and other clowns. He had known his share in those youthful days, those days of knowledge and the power of it, of riot and the pleasure of being young. There came up in his mind a dim vision of a slender girl he had met in Paris. She, too, had been a dancer, a vagabond, and she, too, had died with him beside her, listening as he was now; for she, as each of us, had some far-away "Roma" offering delights. Life is but one long repetition, a spool which tumbles over and over, crushing one generation as it uplifts another to the same sun and the same unheeding heaven. Montfarling said decidedly:

"She must go to the city."

"But, Signor," said the bewildered clown.

"I shall have my motor car ready in half an hour. We shall take her. Once there, she has a chance."

Bertoldi's face gleamed. "It is feefty miles," he added, with some foreign doubt.

"Perhaps an hour's run——"

"Per Dio!" ejaculated the clown, hesitating between God and the fairies.

* * * * * * * * *

Twenty minutes later the motor car was quivering before the tent. Padron Bertoldi had spent that time explaining and protesting to the man and the woman. He had bullied them into submission.

"If she must go, we all——"

"No," said Bertoldi firmly.

"Let me——" pleaded the mother.

"The Doctor order not," lied Padron Bertoldi, who knew the uselessness of them. Holding the child in his arms, pulling the blankets around her closely, the clown broke away from their entreaties, and the wheels of the car crunched in the first revolution. The man and the woman gave a heartbreaking sob of farewell.

Mile after mile covered the trembling car, the body of it swaying as a hammock, and the motor coughing regularly. Padron Bertoldi crouched in the tonneau on the floor, holding the child. At any other time he would have been terribly frightened, but not now, as he saw the weary miles slip into the century of beetles and other slow-moving things.

"We will soon be there," called the Doctor, slowing the car. "Just over the hill," he said, pointing to the rise of ground.

Padron Bertoldi felt the child stirring as they made the ascent. Like a crimson ball, flung aside by a weary god, the sun was creeping to the edge of all things. The car spun out on the brow of the hill and caught hoarsely for its breath. Padron Bertoldi saw below the lavender picture of a great city spread out as an immense fan. Towers, domes, uplifted spires, banked one upon another, mass on mass, marble and tiling and beaten gold, the colors softened by the delicacy of the misty distance. The child opened her eyes, and muttered:

"Yes, carissima," said the clown happily, and he lifted her up. "There——"

Her tired eyes absorbed the beautiful stretch of fairyland. As a call of welcome swept up to them the voice of some sweet-toned bell. There were birds in the heavens, black against a golden sun.

"Roma——" whispered Francesca, sinking back wearily satisfied.

Montfarling threw on the lever and gently applied the brake. The clown regarded him with a grim smile which had in it something of gilded bitterness. The clown he remained, miserable in his painted happiness.

"We are all liars," he said plaintively.

MR. BOWSER'S VISION

He Sees Millions of Profits In Huckleberries.

PLANS A TRIP TO PARIS.

Strange Effect of Visit of French Count With a New Recipe For the Manufacture of Wine—Happy Dreams In Black Bottle.

[Copyright, 1907, by Homer Sprague.]

There was a beaming, balmy smile on Mr. Bowser's face as he came home from the office the other evening, and as Mrs. Bowser met him at the door he put his arm around her and called her "old girl" and said he had been thinking of her all the afternoon. Before sitting down to dinner he insisted on stroking her hair and holding her hand, and all through the meal he spoke in her praise and plainly told her that he didn't hold her responsible for the size of the gas bills. Now and then he would burst into laughter and slap his leg and ask what she was going to do when they reached Paris and if she thought she would enjoy seeing the room in the Tower of London where Louis XVI. was beheaded.

Mrs. Bowser could not make him out, but she knew that he had news of some kind to communicate and that he would get around to it after the meal. She was right. He kept it to himself until he had his cigar alight, and then,

"I STARTED LIFE AS A POOR MAN, DIDN'T I?"

after a brief absence upstairs, he stood before her with a benign look on his face and said:

"Mrs. Bowser, you are a good woman—a mighty good woman."

"Yes?"

"You deserve all you are going to get. When I think of how happy you will be it makes me rejoice."

"But what am I going to get?" she asked.

"And your mother—she is a good woman, a mighty good woman. She is my mother-in-law, but I think just as much of her as if she were my own dear mother. The good old soul, but I'd like to hug her. I will make her one of the happiest women in the world, and she shall bless the day I married her daughter."

"But what is all this mystery about? What has happened during the day?"

"Mystery—ha, ha, ha! No mystery about it, dear. We are simply about to become millionaires ten times over. We may not own the whole earth in a couple of years more, but we shall have the title deeds to a good share of it. Do you think $100,000 a year sufficient pin money for you? If you don't, just say so. I am not the man to stint my wife on pin money. Scuse me a minute, will you?"

He passed into the library and was gone a minute and a half and then reappeared licking his lips. Mrs. Bowser sniffed the air and detected an aroma, but couldn't exactly define it. Mr. Bowser's smile was now both paternal and benignant, and, sitting down with a chuckle, he said:

"You are dying to hear all about it, and I won't keep you in suspense. I started life as a poor man, didn't I?"

"Yes."

"When we got back from our bridal tour I had only 75 cents left—only 75. You began to worry as to how we should get along, but I told you to trust in me. I knew myself. I knew that a man with brains who was a natural financier could not be kept down. We haven't had to go to the poorhouse, have we?"

"No, indeed."

"Poorhouse—ha, ha, ha! Bowser, the financier, in the poorhouse! Hasn't every scheme I have taken hold of proved a glorious success? Hasn't every plan worked out as I expected?"

Mrs. Bowser thought of the hundred and one schemes he had originated and made a failure of, but it was no time to furnish a list of them. She wanted to hear what his latest was. He again asked to be excused and dodged out into the hall for a couple of minutes. She thought she heard a gurgling in his direction, but was not sure. When he returned he said:

"You know what the huckleberry is, of course?"

"Yes."

"And you have heard of logwood?"

"Certainly."

"And alcohol?"

"Of course."

"Well, those are the three things that are going to make us rich. When I left the house this morning I had no more idea of what was in store for me than you have of flying across the Atlantic. When I reached the office I found a gentleman named DuBois waiting for me. He was a count before the French republic. He was not only a count, but he was worth his millions. When the nobility had to go he found himself a poor man. Some counts would have committed suicide, but he was not that sort of a count. He cast around for a way to rebuild his fortunes. After many failures and disappointments he has finally struck it. That's what brought him over to see me."

"But he didn't come over from France especially to see you, did he?" asked Mrs. Bowser.

"Certainly. He came straight to the office from the steamer. He came to see Bowser first of all. He would have waited all day for me to come in. Mrs. Bowser, I want you to know that your husband is just as well known in Europe, Asia and Africa as in America. The count had a scheme to lay before me, and, being a business man, he didn't waste any time. Do you know the value of the French wines made every year?"

"I have no idea."

"Over $300,000,000, my dear. Two-thirds of them are made of grapes, but the other one-third of something else. The profit on them is enormous. There is no earthly reason why French wines can't be made right here in our own city. All you have to do is to mix up the stuff and put a French label on the bottle. The count came over to propose a business partnership, and I am going in with him. Scuse me a minute, dear."

He stepped out into the hall, and this time there was no mistake about the gurgle. There was a glad light in his eyes as he returned, but he had to scratch his head and look up at the ceiling before he could remember where he left off, and continued:

"Enormous profits, Mrs. Bowser—enormous. Five bushels of the American huckleberry, together with one gallon of alcohol, two pounds of logwood and ten barrels of water, make $50,000 worth of the best French wines; clear profit, $45,000. Any gold mine to beat that? Put your husband on the back and call him a bully boy. I attend to the huckleberry part and the count to the rest. I advertise in the morning paper for 10,000 bushels of huck—huck"—

There was no longer room to doubt Mr. Bowser's condition. He was smiling feebly and looking up at the ceiling, and he seemed to have come to the end of his story. Mrs. Bowser passed around behind him and took a pint bottle of some dark liquid from his breast pocket. There were but a few sips left in the bottle. The gurgling noise was explained.

"What do you call this?" she asked.

"Zhat? Zhat's our huck—huckleberry wine. Count had a bottle of it all ready made for me. Mrsh. Bowsher, zhe profits are enormous!"

"Do you know that you are intoxicated?"

"Me 'toxicated? Ha, ha, ha! Good shoke—it's just er logwood making me feel good! Five bushels of American huckleberries, ten barrels of—of—ten barrels of what did I shay? No matter, zhe profits are shimply gigantic. Don't even have to use er best kind of logwood. Any old sort of logwood will do. Er count shays zhat half er profits will amount to—to"—

"Mr. Bowser, you must go to bed," she said as his head fell forward on his breast. "I wouldn't have the cook see you in this condition for anything."

"Cook? Shee me? Condishun? Whaz you mean, Mrsh. Bowsher? Can't I take five bushels of buck—huckleberries and ten bar'ls of wa—water and"—

Then he slid out of his chair under the reading table and knew no more. French counts, huckleberries, logwood and alcohol were no more to him. The profits had been enormous, and he had made his millions. It was a warm night, and Mrs. Bowser slipped a sofa pillow under his head and turned out the gas and went upstairs to bed and left him by his lonesome.

PRILL IDENTIFIES FORD AS MAN WHO ROBBED HIM HERE

Prisoner is Held at Toledo on Two Charges of Forging Checks.

Benjamin F. Prill, who was slugged and robbed back of Lindenwood cemetery several weeks ago, Sunday identified William Ford, held in the Toledo jail, as the man who beat him with a blackjack andd took $42 and a revolver away from him.

The identification was complete and was made before the man was brought before Prill as the suspect. Accompanied by Sheriff Jesse Grice and Capt. Henry Stoll, of the Pennsylvania police force, Prill entered the jail and in passing through the corridor looked at a man engaged in conversation with the turnkey and said: "Why, there's the man that hit me." Ford denied it at first, but afterward made some damaging admissions.

He is also known as William McChord and Charles Mason and is accused of having forged two checks, one for $27 and the other for $3. The matter of turning him over to the authorities of this county will be considered by the sheriff, chief of police and prosecutor at Toledo and if they believe the charge against him here is the strongest arrangements will be made to have him brought to this city for trial.

A warrant for his arrest was left with the sheriff by Mr. Grice, who also requested that the prisoner be held and he be notified in event he should possibly secure an acquittal if the Toledo authorities decide to try him.

FINE MUSIC IS ASSURED.

The Kilties' Band Begins Engagement at Robison Park Tonight.

It is not often that perfection in dancing and playing is to be found in one person, but Angus MacMillan Fraser, the bag-piper with the famous Scotch-Canadian band, the Kilties, is not only the champion bag-piper, but also the American champion sword, highland fling and sailor's horupipe dancer. Mr. Fraser is a notable representative of a noble race, and brings to his work that regard for it that is necessary in all successes. He enjoys his dancing and playing almost as much as those who hear and see him, and though it is by no means easy, he is on the program at every concert given by this great band.

The costumes worn by the Kilties are true Scotch Highland plaids, and their brilliancy is only equalled by the playing of those who wear them. Mr. Fraser is a distinct acquisition to this famous band, and his grace and agility, as well as his musical ability, are a constant source of admiration to those who see and hear him.

The Kilties will appear at the Robison park, beginning a three days' engagement, tonight. England's sovereign set his seal of approval on the band by commanding it to play before him twice in one month; the public everywhere has approved of this seal most enthusiastically by flocking to hear them when opportunity presents.

IOWA EDITOR IS FOUND GUILTY.

A. H. Sniff, of Missouri Valley, Is Convicted of Manslaughter.

Missouri Valley, Iowa, Sept. 9.—The jury in the case of A. H. Sniff, editor of the Harrison County News, accused of the murder of M. E. Brundige, returned a verdict early yesterday morning finding him guilty of manslaughter. Saturday Editor Sniff took the stand in his own behalf and declared that he had been advised by the city marshal to "get a gun and kill Brundige." This was emphatically denied by the marshal, testifying in rebuttal. The cause of the tragedy was an article which appeared in Mr. Sniff's paper on the evenings of March 4, relating to Earl Fonts, brother-in-law of Brundige, who had got into trouble at a dance. Brundige and Sniff had an encounter in the street and the editor shot his opponent.

MINISTERS FIGHT; ONE IS KILLED.

Quarrel Over a Hog Leads to Fatality in Arkansas.

Little Rock, Ark., Sept. 9.—In a quarrel over a hog Rev. John Grant, a Methodist minister of Galloway, Ark., yesterday shot and killed Rev. Martin Glenn, a Baptist minister. After the shooting Grant ordered a man employed by Rev. Glenn to get a horse for him, which he mounted and rode away. About noon Mr. Grant went back to the Glenn place with his shot gun, saying he had heard that Mr. Glenn was not dead, and that he had come back to "fix him sure."

STOCKS AND BONDS.

The Day on Wall Street.

New York, Sept. 9.—Very light orders appeared for execution at the opening of the stock market and prices moved sluggishly downwards. Northern Pacific declined ¾ point and American Smelting and Colorado Fuel ⅝. Third Avenue sold at an advance of 1½ and Reading and Pennsylvania rose small fractions.

A sluggish recovery set in which continued until Reading had risen 1¼ beyond Saturday's closing. Amalgamated Copper reached 72 but liberal offerings at that level drove it off sharply and affected the other metal stocks, besides restricting the advance in the railroads. The tone was firm at the end of the hour.

Prices depressed again and sales generally were below Saturday's level. There were heavy dealings in United States Steel at a decline of ⅝. St. Louis Southwestern fell 1¼ points and Northern Pacific, Denver & Rio Grande, Amalgamated Copper and International Paper 1 point. The market steadied and became dull. Reading recovered to the top figure. Bonds were heavy.

Higher prices were paid for stocks in the afternoon, the market rising to the best in sympathy with Reading which gained 2 points.

Very little business was transacted but prices in the industrial list held firmly.

The market closed fairly steady and intensely dull. The rise in call money to 6 per cent was attributed to preparations for New York City Bonds and Union Pacific Convertible Subscriptions tomorrow. Stocks sold off in response. Reading reacting 1¼ and Canadian Pacific falling 1¼ below Saturday's close and General Electric 1. Missouri Pacific, American Smelting and Sloss-Sheffield Steel rose 1.

DAIRYMEN ARE DEFIANT.

Declare They Will Make War on New Milk Ordinance.

The meeting of dairymen at the court house assembly room Saturday evening developed that while the milkmen are in a big wrangle among themselves, there is to be united war against the provisions of the new milk regulation ordinance if it is signed by Mayor Hosey. There was manifest a disposition in some quarters to ignore its provisions and provoke an arrest for the purpose of testing the new law, and there was also threats of a boycott to see how long the people of the city can do without milk.

The most important action taken, however, was the decision to not enforce the recently-voted advance in price of milk to eight cents per quart until it is seen what Mayor Hosey intends to do regarding signing the ordinance in its present form.

CHANGES AT POWER PLANT.

Pennsylvania Sends Ferguson and Lechleitner to Allegheny.

Some changes which are a nice promotion to the men affected have taken place in the electrical and power departments of the Pennsylvania. Thomas A. Ferguson and E. Lechleitner, the former the chief and the latter the assistant electrician at the power plant in this city, have been transferred to Allegheny to take positions in the company's power plant. Philip Sweeney has been assigned to this city, to take an important position in the power plant. He comes from Allegheny. Mr. Ferguson and Mr. Lechleitner have been employed a number of years in the electrical and power departments of the Pennsylvania, both beginning work in an humble position.

TWO ENGINES DERAILED.

Wabash Has Mishap at Hugo Which Ties Up Road Awhile.

The two engines pulling the westbound Wabash freight, Nos. 390 and 71, left the rails at Hugo this morning as the train was about to take the siding to allow passenger train No. 8 to pass. All wheels of both engines went down in the ground and the track was completely blocked for three or four hours. The wreck crew had to go to the scene. The track was cleared at 11 o'clock and the passenger train came in at 11:15. Hugo is a new station, or rather a new name for the junction west of the city which the Wabash men called the "Muncie Junction" and the Lake Erie and Western people the "Wabash Junction." The two names were confusing and hence the name of Hugo, which was adopted by both roads.

NOT THE BEST ON RECORD.

Saturday's Chicago Excursion Fell Short of Expectations.

Because the smaller towns on the Pennsylvania and the Nickel Plate roads did not turn out very many excursionists the week-end excursion over those lines to Chicago last Saturday were not up to the expectations, though they were by no means insignificant affairs. The total number taken to Chicago was 2,205. Of these the Pennsylvania took 1,555 and the Nickel Plate 650 and by far the greater number were Fort Wayne people. The Pennsylvania sold 1,167 tickets here, leaving only 388 for the outside points. About the same ratio of travel characterized the business of the Nickel Plate. Each line got more than it expected from Fort Wayne and only or less than half from towns between this city and Chicago.

ROBBED IN CHICAGO.

Gus Degitz Relieved of Watch and Cash Sunday.

C. A. Degitz, foreman of the new car wheel foundry at the Bass works, estimates the cost of a trip to Chicago Sunday at $79. He was among the party of excursionists on the Pennsylvania train Saturday night and while on a street car on Sixty-third street he missed his watch and pocketbook. The watch chain had been clipped off just below the bar which anchored it to his vest and the watch and piece of chain were taken, together with a purse containing some money which Mr. Degitz carried in his hip pocket. Evidently the robbery was committed at Englewood, where Mr. Degitz was bustled about quite severely in a big crowd. He estimates his loss at $72 and that with his railway fare and the cash he had to borrow to meet expenses while in the Windy City, he says will aggregate $70.

RAILWAY MEN PROMOTED.

Pennsylvania Makes Some New Conductors and Engineers.

On account of the constantly increasing business on the Pennsylvania, the local officials have made some recent promotions among the trainmen and the enginemen. A. J. Filler, F. Blue, B. A. Brown, H. P. Dinger and C. A. Ames have been advanced from flagmen to freight conductors; Engineers H. L. Foster, F. C. Welsh, B. Lower, H. Hamilton and J. M. Roush have been transferred from the extra to the regular list of freight engineers and Firemen M. C. Wolford, F. Wilmore, W. Wyman, H. L. Ludwig, J. F. Majors and O. Rost, who passed a successful examination several weeks ago, have been promoted to engineers.

ENGINEES COMMITS SUICIDE.

Because he thought he had been blacklisted and was forever barred from work as a locomotive engineer, Richard T. Cassidy drank two ounces of carbolic acid at his home in Indianapolis yesterday and his wife found him dead shortly afterwards. Cassidy left a note assigning the cause for the deed the supposition that Supt. N. A. Neville and Trainmaster W. A. Shaff, of the Big Four, had caused his name to be placed on the railway blacklist. He was once employed as a locomotive engineer by the Big Four and it is alleged he was dismissed for drunkenness. Later he took a position as engineer in a canning factory, but did not like the work and remained there only a short time. Cassidy formerly resided in Fort Wayne and many of his railway friends here will be pained and surprised to hear of his tragic death.

PUTTING IN NEW MACHINERY.

Among the improvements to be made at the Pennsylvania shops this week is the installation of another crane in the blacksmith department to handle engine frames at the hammer which will be assigned to that work when the crane is in operation. This crane was formerly in the machine shop yards. A drill press is also being installed in the tin shop. Another improvement is a new floor in the car machine shop, which was put in yesterday, a large force of carpenters from the east shops being brought in requisition for that purpose.

EXAMINING THE PENNSYLVANIA.

Alexander Shane and other members of the Indiana railroad commission are out on an inspection trip of that part of the Western division of the Pennsylvania which lies within the bounds of Hoosierdom today. They are traveling in an observation car which is running as a special train. They left Clark Junction early this morning and will arrive here some time this evening. Particular attention is being given to the double tracks, switches and platforms with a view of ascertaining if all are the proper distances apart.

HAD TWO RIBS BROKEN.

While his engine was taking water at Oakwood yesterday, Nickel Plate Frieman Benjamin Karbaugh slipped and fell from the tank to the ground, striking on the edge of the tank and fracturing two of his ribs. He also sustained some other injuries of a less serious character. He was brought to St. Joseph hospital, where Dr. J. M. Dinnen is attending him.

SHOPMEN RETURN TO WORK.

Th Pennsylvania shops are in better shape for workmen today than they were at any time last week on account of a number of those who had been off duty resuming work this morning. In this class are O. W. Kamm, Frank Girard, C. C. Swartz, R. A. Shaw, C. L. Sossenheimer, John Conners, Ed Frease, N. A. Allgier, J. M. Stevens, James J. Majors, Henry Regel, Fred Gleusenkamp and George Rupley. Most of these had been on a vacation, though a few had been off because of injury.

NOT BADLY INJURED.

The Peru Chronicle says: "Engineers W. H. Hammond and Homer Belding, of the Wabash, came home this morning from Danville, Ill., where they visited Engineer C. F. Wilcox and Brakeman C. F. Evans, who were injured in the collision at West Lebanon. Engineer Wilcox is not nearly so badly injured as first reported and will soon be able to come home. His injuries include mashed fingers, a burned arm and a hip wound. He was not badly scalded and not internally injured. Brakeman Evans is also much improved and will soon be home.

BLISTERED HIS HANDS.

A. W. Roembke, an appreatice in the blacksmith shop of the Wabash, will be unable to work for awhile as a result of an accident which fell to his lot this morning. He inadvertently grabbed hold of some hot irons and the inside of his fingers and the palms of his hands were burned to a crisp before he realized the situation. Dr. Kaadt attended him.

ACCIDENT AT KNITTING MILLS.

An accident in the engine room at the Wayne Knitting mills this morning caused a temporary suspension of operations today. As soon as the girls discovered that something was wrong with the machinery they left for home, despite the assurance that the works would be ready to resume in an hour or two. Most of the operators returned to work at noon.

HAD HIS THUMB CRUSHED.

I. Sternberger, of the Wabash machine shop, had his right thumb crushed this morning by getting it between a plank and the frame of an engine. The accident will disable Mr. Steinberger several days.

New names on the sick list today are Pennsylvania Enginemen H. L. Kennedy, W. H. Fisher, F. H. Bredelman, George Burchard, C. F. Keim, J. Mooney, L. Koch, Philip Titus, W. H. Biedewig and P. A. Farley.

HOT ONE STRAIGHT OVER THE PLATE BY REV. WM. SUNDAY

Former Ballplayer, Now a Minister, Preaches in Fort Wayne.

Rev. William Sunday held his audience spellbound Sunday morning at the First Presbyterian church, when he gave the first sermon in this city since the dedication of the Salvation Army citadel. Almost every seat in the church was filled with those who were anxious to hear the converted baseball player speak of the Word of God. There were many there who very seldom attend church, being drawn there by the fact that "Billy" Sunday used to be one of those who hung around the saloons and street corners at night, but who one night heard singing in a church across from where he was sitting and went into it. When he left it he was a converted man and ever since has been preaching in the gospel field and has changed thousands upon thousands of men from the path of the unrighteous to the path of the Almighty.

Rev. Sunday's words were sharp and so quickly spoken that many in the rear of the church were not able to understand some things he said. They were full of the fire and vigor which he always possessed on the ball field. His actions were no less vehement than his words, pacing from one side of the pulpit to the other, assuming all sorts of gestures and bending every nerve and muscle to make his sermon tell on the people. It is safe to say that Billy Sunday never worked any harder on the ball diamond than he did yesterday morning.

Shortcomings of the Church.

Rev. Sunday chose his topic from Second Timothy, second chapter, fifteenth verse: "Study to Show Thyself Approved Unto God." His thoughts were all very unconventional and his sentences epigramatic. He strove to show that all the "isms" which have arisen are due to the laxity of the church, that the great crime wave which is going over this country is due to the same fact. Rev. Sunday said that he was not a pessimist but an optimist, that the church was his spiritual mother and that he loved it with all his heart, yet he found many faults with it, not because of the doctrines but of the conditions existing, saying that in some churches God was so hidden that he could not be found with a search warrant. Every corpuscle, every tissue, every drop of blood, every bone and every piece of flesh was in love with the bible, yet he did not agree with some of the thoughts contained in it. He said that there was too much frozen formality to some churches. In this instance he told of the grocery man who kept his store open for every Sunday in three months except one and then he came to church to pass the communion and strode up and down the aisles, as though he was one of the best workers in the name of God.

Hits Out at Evils.

He dwelt strongly upon the stolid indifference of man to the lost conditions which are surrounding him. Instead of trying to regain them he maintains the position of never having possessed them. Rev. Sunday said that he was not speaking for the people, but to the people and for the God. Why such conditions as to permit a man to come to Chicago without enough clothes to flag a hand car, start a "fake" business and now be worth over $4,000,000 and a member of church. The divorce question was a thing which he discussed at length and said that he took the position of the Roman Catholic in regards to that. He believes that no man or woman who has ever been divorced should be allowed to remarry until his or her wife or husband is dead.

This is a strenuous age, yet many people bewail the fact that they feel obliged to come to church. They say they haven't time, yet they always have time to go to the club and stay out all night or go to the card party and compete for a little cream pitcher or a whisk broom and then when they come to the church on Sunday they feel tired, worn-out and jay-like and easily find fault with the preacher when they themselves are at fault.

America Leads World in Crime.

Here he spoke of the fact that America leads the world in crime, there being 120 murders to every million of population, while the lowest is about fifteen to every million. There is $13,000,000 more spent every year in prosecuting people than is given to the church in the same length of time. The preachers and the school teachers of this country are the poorest paid of any of its workmen and this is another disgrace to this land. Of all the people that do good and are the means of saving people from a bad grave the church and the school room are the best mediums, yet many shiners of shoes are better repaid than shiners of brains.

God and man never change, man can develop, but never change. God can never change, but other things change. God is always the same. Yet many preachers talk of God in different ways. Here he told of the country woman in the sun-bonnet who went to Chicago and one day came down the street crying. When asked what was the trouble she said that she had gone to one church and had her Christ taken away, went to McVicker's theater where she heard Bob Ingersoll and had her bible taken away and went to a style shop and had her present mode of dress taken away. She said she wanted to go to her home on the farm, where she could continue to worship God in the good old fashioned way that she had been used to for so long.

God, Not Religion, Saves Souls.

One of Rev. Sunday's most forceful points was when he said that religion never saves any one, but that God saves all. Religion is the medium of getting to God, but it is not the vital thing. Many people profess to have religion and believe by that that they will be saved, but it is not the real belief of God. The church should go on attempting to convert people and take them to God. The church should be like the drummer boy who had gone through many battles of importance, such as Waterloo, and who upon one occasion was told to "beat a retreat." "Beat a retreat?" said the drummer. "Never," and he beat a charge which led the army to victory. So must the church never beat a retreat, but beat a charge and go on with their work with the people of God.

In closing Rev. Sunday gave some very helpful thoughts to American people. "Be workers," he said, "and not knockers; be helpers, and not critics." Rev. Sunday said that there may be better preachers of the gospel than he, but there was never a preacher of a better gospel. He said that he wanted to warn the people on the one hand and encourage them on the other.

Audience Much Stirred.

When he had completed his sermon many in the congregation could not regain their composure for several seconds, so stirred were they with the talk which they had heard.

Rev. Sunday is a sufferer of hay fever and the services were begun yesterday at 10:30 to allow him to catch the Chicago limited over the Pennsylvania at 12:01 for Winona. "My friend McKim," as he called him, had promised to have the Pennsylvania limited stop at Winona in order to allow him to be there the rest of the day. His health is not the best just now and the sermon which he was scheduled to give next Sunday at the same church has been cancelled.

Autumn Announces Its Arrival In Our Silk Department

New Ones in Plaid Silks

OUR early showing of these new plaids will prove a revelation of loveliness to every one. Perhaps the beautiful colorings brought out this year are a concession to autumn foliage—at any rate they were never more gorgeous—more harmoniously blended.

There are large plaids and small plaids, gay and sombre in color effect, and adapted for tailored waists and entire costumes.

Vieing with the plaids for popularity are the new Persian effects and stripes, which we are showing in taffeta and soft twills—all colors and effects.

For Reception and Dinner Gowns

The new Bordered Chiffon Cloth is one of the season's most beautiful and effective novelties. This handsome fabric lends itself to any number of designs and models in making, being material and trimming in one.

For evening wear we are also showing a line of Pompadour Crepes and Silks in a variety of colorings—extremely pretty and deserving of the word "dainty."

Each Day the Silks

Will be augmented by new arrivals until the whole of an immense stock is assembled. There's not a novelty but what will be found on our counters, and we promise the women of Fort Wayne oneof the most superb collections of Silks ever brought to select from.
